

Weekly Work Memo
December 10, 2012-December 14, 2012

Timothy Sandole
Belfer Center Associate/Campus Wikipedian

Monday, December 10

1. Started drafting a Wiki article titled "American Primacy" on Microsoft Word (3 hours).
2. Revised and ultimately completed "American Primacy" and submitted to Jim Smith for review (5 hours).

Tuesday, December 11

1. Started preliminary research on Pakistan's nuclear program, per Graham Allison's request from last week's meeting him (5 hours)
2. Harvard Kennedy School Holiday Party (3 hours)

Wednesday, December 12

1. Entire day dedicated to researching Pakistan's nuclear program (8 hours)

Thursday, December 13

1. HTML coded, authored, and published Wikipedia article on American Primacy, contributing over 8,000 bytes to Wikipedia. Article can be found here: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Polarity\_%28international\_relations%29 (4 hours).
2. Meeting with Graham Allison, director of the Belfer Center for Science and International Affairs, to discuss my Wikipedia strategy. He said my Pakistan research is a good start, but he wants me to set up future meetings with him, his RAs, and scholars from the Managing the Atom project. Meeting with RAs set up for next Tuesday (1 hour).
3. I experimented with Wikipedia's new VisualEditor tool, which will eventually allow Wikipedians to edit articles without HTML coding (3 hours)

Friday, December 14

1. Pakistan WMB researched focusing on work by Olli Heinonen, Matthew Bunn, Rolf Mowatt-Larssen, Vipin Narang, Walter C. Ladwig III, and a Belfer Center publication titled "An Introduction to Pakistan's Military." (8 hours)